3 Days / 2 Nights Southern Tanzania (MIKUMI)

Overview

3-Days/2-Nights in Mikumi National Park. Mikumi National Park, often referred to as the “Serengeti of the South,” features expansive open plains known as the Mkata Floodplain, where wildlife is easily spotted against the scenic backdrop of the Uluguru and Rubeho Mountains. The park is home to elephants, lions, giraffes, zebras, wildebeests, and numerous bird species, making it excellent for short but rewarding safaris. Visitors primarily engage in game drives and photography, with hippo pools offering close-up views of hippos and aquatic birds. Its accessibility from Dar es Salaam and the open visibility of animals makes Mikumi unique as one of Tanzania's most convenient yet wildlife-rich destinations.

Full-Day Game Drive and Maasai Boma Visit in Mikumi

A full-day game drive in Mikumi National Park provides visitors with an immersive safari experience across the vast Mkata floodplain, often compared to the Serengeti for its scenery and wildlife density. This drive allows you to spot elephants, zebras, lions, wildebeests, giraffes, and a variety of antelopes, as well as colorful birdlife. The extended amount of time in the park increases chances of witnessing predator activity, animal migrations within the plains, and the serene beauty of Mikumi's landscapes from sunrise to afternoon.

Visiting a Maasai Boma near Mikumi offers a cultural experience that complements the wildlife adventure. Guests get the opportunity to learn about the Maasai people's traditional lifestyle, including their dances, attire, cattle-keeping culture, and homestead structures. It is a chance to interact with community members, understand their customs, and appreciate the cultural richness that exists alongside Tanzania's natural attractions.
